

April 5, 2024

SEC Stays Climate Disclosure Requirements

On April 5, 2024, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) announced that it has stayed its final rule requiring public companies to disclose climate-related risks and financial impacts. The SEC's decision is a significant development in the ongoing regulatory landscape surrounding climate change disclosure. The SEC's stay of the rule is effective until the end of 2024, and the Commission will continue to evaluate the rule's impact on investors and the market. The SEC's decision is based on the Commission's ongoing review of the rule's impact on investors and the market. The SEC's decision is a significant development in the ongoing regulatory landscape surrounding climate change disclosure. The SEC's stay of the rule is effective until the end of 2024, and the Commission will continue to evaluate the rule's impact on investors and the market. The SEC's decision is based on the Commission's ongoing review of the rule's impact on investors and the market.

Paul Weiss

